

Friends of IPC (FIPC) is an independent organisation that supports the idea of International People's College.

The Mission

The mission of FIPC is to contribute to a diverse group of students at International People's College by providing support to disadvantaged, young people unable to finance their desire to become students at International People's College.

Scholarships

Provision of a number of scholarships to especially students from developing countries is among the core functions of FIPC, which also include fundraising activities - an example is the second-hand shop at International People's College where FIPC benefits from the surplus income.

Members

Members are former students but also private people, organisations and companies who want to show their support to International People's College.

One of the most popular subjects at IPC is Development Management where students learn how to develop their own NGO projects.

“The few months I was in Denmark really turned me into a strong, caring, open minded and ambitious woman. Now being back home I feel like I can face any challenge and I know that the world is not a lonely place.”

Natasha Mwaka Chambwa, Scholarship student Autumn 2012

International People's College (IPC)

is a traditional Danish Folk High School.

Students from the entire World

In contrast to other Danish Folk High Schools, however, IPC is not focused on Denmark and Danish traditions but rather on international studies and the entire globe.

Students from more than 30 different countries make IPC a cultural melting pot, which is exactly the focus of the school – to live and learn from people and cultures from all over the world.

International since 1921

Ever since IPC's foundation in 1921, it has been a place that celebrated diversity and appreciated it as a precondition for fruitful learning.

The idea behind IPC is simple – if people from around the world come together, live and study under the same roof for a period of time, they will discover important things about themselves and the world – about life in general.

Students' Output

Through international education the students will become more tolerant, engaged, and open minded. They will make an important step in becoming active and responsible global citizens, and travel back home with tools to change the world for the better.
