

Dorothy Nankunda, Uganda

Dorothy arrived at IPC with a clear mission: to learn about alternative education systems and take her knowledge with her to Uganda, where she works for an organisation that supports teenage mothers in Uganda. Her time at IPC became a turning point, reshaping both her personal growth and her approach to community work.

Aravindraj Susairaj, India

Aravindraj came to IPC inspired by his father, who was a student at IPC in 1996 and later dedicated his life to children's rights and social justice in India. Through his time at IPC, Aravindraj discovered the strength of communal living and developed the skills to continue his family's NGO—an organisation that empowers marginalized communities through education and awareness of their rights - in Southern India.

Erfan Moosavian, Iran

Erfan worked as a translator and English teacher in Iran before coming to IPC in search of a different education where community and open dialogue are at the heart of learning. At IPC, he has enjoyed engaging with people from around the world, experiencing the IPC spirit with collaborative, informal learning. Here, he has gained not just new skills, but a deeper understanding of culture, communication, and connection—lessons he'll carry forward into his next chapter.

Friends of IPC

Friends of IPC is an independent organisation that champions the values and mission of International People's College (IPC). We are committed to fostering global understanding, diversity, and access to education for all.

What we do

Friends of IPC strives to ensure that talented and motivated young people—regardless of their financial circumstances—can benefit from the life-changing experience of studying at IPC.

Our work focuses on:

- Scholarships: Providing financial assistance, particularly to students from low-income countries, to help them attend IPC.
- Community Engagement: Running PR activities and social events to build connections among students, alumni, and supporters.
- Sustainable Projects: Managing initiatives like the IPC Vintage Shop, where surplus income directly supports our work.
